Clinging to my hair

Summary

First person POV one shot. Parasoul battles Eliza and her skeletal parasite, Sekhmet, but she's not alone.

- A translation of Accroché à mes cheveux by MiaQc

As the bathhouse water turns to blood, I face Eliza and her skeletal parasite, Sekhmet, but I'm not alone.

As I push Eliza back with a Napalm Pillar, a pillar of flame emitted by Krieg, I feel my hair being pulled tight.

"OUCH! Be careful, Captain!"

Captain Olimar, clinging tightly to my red hair, apologizes in Hocotatean.

"It's hard for me to hang on to you, Your Highness." He adds, and his words are translated through a small bracelet he wears. "You move so much!"

"I don't really have a choice! Why did you want to come with me? Eliza isn't a weakling!"

"Did you just call me a weakling?" Eliza asks, then her voice transforms into Sekhmet's. "WRETCHED PRINCESS!"

Olimar blows his whistle to call his Pikmins for reinforcements. While Sekhmet, having taken her host's place on the battlefield, slaughters the poor Pikmins, I leap back and fire a Napalm Shot. My attack hits Sekhmet and she gives way for Eliza.

"You're wasting your time." Eliza says. "You can't defeat us!"

"We'll see!" I retorted.

The Black Egrets aren't with me, but I can destroy Eliza and her parasite with Olimar and the Pikmins' help. I have to!
